Aim

The main purpose of the School is to encourage the ideas exchange and the scientific collaborations between Italian and Russian universities and institutions, in the fields of matrix methods and applied linear algebra. The School offers to advanced undergraduate, master's and PhD students a long time for learning and thinking over scientific research topics, not limited to short courses and seminars, and the opportunity of entering in direct contact with people and institutions of excellence in the field. Attending the courses of the School is equivalent to acquire credits of extra-curriculum activity. The School is organized under an Agreement of didactic-scientific collaboration signed by the Rectors of Lomonosov and Tor Vergata Universities on September 2009.

Lecturers

Lecturers of the mini-courses of the School will be mainly professors of TV, LMSU and INM-RAS. There will be also seminars held by professors of other academic and research institutions.

Applications

Italian students should submit application to the e-mail address difiore@mat.uniroma2.it, Russian students to eugene.tyrtshnikov@gmail.com, and students from other countries to both, following the instructions in www.mat.uniroma2.it/~tvmsscho.

Estimated lodging expenses for the whole month of the school: about 200 euros.

Estimated meal expenses (in university canteen) for each part of the school: 150 euros.

Some funds for contributing to students expenses might be available.

Deadline

Applications should be preferably submitted within Monday, April 7, 2014, and not later than Monday, April 21, 2014.
